'Free' Luers.

Price for meal £4 (unwaged) £6 (Waged). All proceeds will go towards Jeff's defence network. Starts 7.30pm.

In June 01, 23 year old forest defence activist Jeffrey "Free" Luers was sentenced to 22 years and 8 months in prison for the burning of 3 Sport Utility Vehicles (SUV's) in Eugene, Oregon along with 'Craig 'Critter' Marshal'. To make a statement about global warming. Both activists took measures to make sure that no one would be injured as a result of their action and scouted the location for months beforehand. An arson specialist later confirmed that the action did not pose any threat to people based on its size and distance from any fuel source. Despite the fact that this action hurt no one, caused only $40,000 in damages and the cars were later resold, Jeff was sent to prison for a sentence considerably longer than those convicted of murder, kidnapping and rape in Oregon state.

Free's appeal was filed in January 2002 with the state response filed in July 2003 and his lawyer's reply brief in March 2004. Oral arguments are expected in April or May 2004.
