The trials into events during the Genoa G8 summit continue. as does the work of supportolegale

Supporto Legale is continuing its committed work in support of the Segreteria Legale and lawyers involved in the trials stemming from events at the Genoa G8 summit (including that in Cosenza) and Naples in March 2001. Set up by a group of media activists from the Indymedia network, together with activists from across Italy, the team is working hard, focusing on communication and information, as well as the more technical and financial side.

"memory is like a collective set of gears - it needs careful oiling - from everyone - in order to continue working"

Over the last three years, Segreteria Legale and lawyers from the Genova Legal Forum - with the technical and financial help of Supporto Legale since May last year - have achieved important results. Having painstakingly sifted through an enormous amount of material, they have ensured the indictment of 28 police officials involved in the Diaz raid, proven that police used metalbars instead of batons during the operation and revealed the dramatic error during the first charge on Via Tolemaide. The quantity of material and the number of trials have meant a massive amount of work for those involved. The continuation of the existing trials and the start of a third major legal proceeding - regarding the torture in the Bolzaneto barracks - have made the work even tougher. But the Segreteria Legale's expenses are high - around 12,000 euros a month.
