Jimmy Mubenga died on the 12th October 2010, while being deported to Angola was being heavily restrained by security guards and had complained of breathing problems before he collapsed, a witness said.

Kevin Wallis, a passenger on the aircraft, said he heard Mubenga complain: "I can't breathe, I can't breathe" for at least 10 minutes before he lost consciousness, and later observed that handcuffs had been used in the restraint.

The guards worked for G4S, a private security firm sub-contracted to carry out deportations.

According to the Institute for Race Relations, 77 people have died as the result of UK's harsh Border Regime in the last 5 years. The Blame for Jimmy's Death must be shared by the officials, politicians and media commentators who support this increasingly racist system of oppression.
